2022 Annual Spring Conference
18 March (Friday) & 19 March (Saturday)

Revisiting Collaborations and Human Connections in Education and Research

Collaboration in the field of education is crucial to internationalization and globalization, and the other way round. Related scholarship generally pay less attention to the phenomenon of interpersonal relationship under the current education policies and practice. Beyond the limits set by written rules, ethical committees and MOUs, fundamental social values and qualities such as care, generosity, kindness and altruism are a rare gem in growing international collaborations. The theme for the 2022 Annual Spring Conference of the Comparative Education Society of Hong Kong (CESHK), “Revisiting Collaborations and Human Connections in Education,” calls for revisiting and rethinking human conditions and the value of humanity in the field of comparative and international education.

Submissions are invited on the following three main sub-themes:

1. Collaboration and competition in education and research
2. Inclusion, exclusion and indifference in human connections
3. Policies, practice and human virtues

Keynote Speakers

Professor Bruce Macfarlane, The Education University of Hong Kong

Problematising the virtue of academic collaboration

Dr. Meril Tamtik, University of Manitoba

Collaboration and Competition in International Education: Shifting Dynamic from the Canadian Perspective

Dr. Hugo Horta, The University of Hong Kong

International collaborations in the social sciences: what has been achieved and to where we want to take them?

Presentations can be in English, Cantonese or Mandarin/Putonghua. English and Chinese sessions will run separately. *If you are wishing to present in Cantonese or Mandarin/Putonghua, you must submit your abstract in written Chinese (traditional or simplified characters).

Additional Information on the Format of the Virtual Conference

This Conference runs as a virtual Conference, and all of those whose papers are accepted will be provided with an access key to the virtual Conference platform so that they can present their papers in real time. Optionally, they can pre-record and submit (narrated slides or video recording). In such cases, presenters will be asked to mark their preference in terms of whether the presentation will be available only during your designated session or during the entire Conference period. The accepted papers will be uploaded to the virtual Conference space, and instructions will be given, when you have registered.
